6149	ANTH-291-A	Topics in Anthropology:Environment & Community Development in Costa Rica	3	MWF	10:00 - 10:50 a.m.	Thornburg		Costa Rica is considered one of the foremost environmentally friendly countries in the world. This course will cover the history and development of Costa Rica's	1/18/2017 - 5/5/2017 KN-161

environment policy and action, how communities engage the environment in terms of tourism, multinational agricultural companies, and economic development. We will meet with government officials, environmental experts, and community action groups. We will also travel to Costa Rica on a 10 day study tour to learn firsthand about Costa Rica's environmental record. The study tour is designed to be very interactive with local people and organizations. We will visit and stay in small towns along the Caribbean coast, visiting Tortugaro National Park, Cahuita, Puerto Viego, and the BriBri Indigenous Reserve. The estimated cost of the trip (over spring break) is $2100 (includes airfare, hotels, meals, in-country transportation, professional translator). A stipend is available to help defray some of the cost. Contact Dr. Thornburg for more information. Sustainability (Su), Global (G), Engaged Learning (EL) and Learning Community (LC) designated Course. Must be coenrolled in LCOM 241 This course satisfies the Learning Community requirement and requires co-registration in LCOM 241. LCOM 241 is not an additional or separate course; it is used only for recording purposes on student transcripts.

6587	ANTH-291-B	Topics in Anthropology: Social Science goes to Hollywood	3	W	6:30 - 9:30 p.m.	Thornburg	This course will examine a variety of social themes of concern to anthropology, sociology, and political science as viewed by the film industry in Hollywood. The film industry has confronted and explored various social issues through its films. Themes such as poverty, racism, war, the environment, cultural identity, political corruption, social justice, etc., are often the central themes of Hollywood movies and documentaries.	1/18/2017 - 5/3/2017 KN-161
