John Haught, Ph.D., is a Senior Fellow in Science and Religion at Woodstock Theological Center at Georgetown University. He lectures internationally on many issues related to science and religion. He earned a doctorate in Theology from the Catholic University of America in 1970 and is a former chair and a professor in the Department of Theology at Georgetown University (1970-2005). His area of specialization is systematic theology, with a particular interest in issues pertaining to science, cosmology, evolution, ecology and religion. He has authored many books, including “Is Nature Enough? Meaning and Truth in the Age of Science” (Cambridge University Press, 2006) and “God After Darwin: The Theology of Evolution” (Westview Press, 2007).

Haught is the winner of the 2002 Owen Garrigan Award in Science and Religion, the 2004 Sophia Award for Theological Excellence and received a Friend of Darwin Award from the National Center for Science Education in 2008. In recognition of his work on theology and science, Haught was awarded the degree of Doctor Honoris Causa by the University of Louvain. He testified for the plaintiffs in the Harrisburg, Pa., “Intelligent Design” trial (Kitzmiller et al. Vs. Dover Board of Education). He and his wife, Evelyn, have two sons and live in Falls Church, Va.
